

Robertson Scholars Leadership Program
Exploration Summer 2014

Updated 8/20/14 Vicki Stocking

End of Summer Essay due 10/6/14

Scholar and Mentor	Abstract and Goals
Dimeji Abidoye            Stacy Tantum, Dept. of Electrical and Computer Engineering, Duke	Life on the frontier: a hands on observation of starting and running a firm in an emerging market Through my conversations with many entrepreneurs, I have learned that while everything is a variable in the first few months of operation, regardless of the type of market in which the firm is established, this uncertainty is increased manifold in emerging markets. I hope someday to serially facilitate the establishment of technological firms in emerging markets, as a result this summer will be spent obtaining a first hand understanding of the challenges that face a brand new business in an emerging market. Further I plan to contextualize the experience by working for a vastly different firm, Oliver Wyman, to see what similarities and differences there are in operation and execution. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Have a clearer picture of my entrepreneurship goals for the future. What problems annoy me the most about frontier markets, and how can I solve that problem while making positive impact and profit.</li> <li>2. Expand my Lagos professional network.</li> <li>3. Have a better understanding of what running a successful startup in Lagos takes.</li> </ol>
Rachel Anderson            Sarah Russell, Global and Civic Opportunities, Duke	Studying Place as Text: Human Rights Research in Europe and Beyond As a Humanity in Action Fellow in Berlin this summer, I will explore national histories of discrimination and resistance and learn about different models of social action through visits to sites such as government agencies, non-profit and community organizations, museums and memorials. In the weeks following the fellowship, I will continue to research human rights independently. Based on my findings, I will develop a hands-on social justice initiative, using the tools I gain from my fellowship as a way to transition from educational inquiry to civic action. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Engagement – During the summer I will develop an Action Project, which is a social justice initiative that I will implement in the year following my Humanity in Action Fellowship. I hope to find a human rights issue that will inspire my future development as a leader.</li> <li>2. Community – I hope to join an international network of fellows committed to driving social change that I may draw upon in the future as I implement my Action Project and future social justice projects.</li> <li>3. Flexibility – I decided to leave the weeks following my fellowship unplanned so that I would be able to continue my human rights studies on my own.</li> </ol>
Anne Burke Baldrige            Hannelore Jarausch, Dept. of French, UNC	An Exploration of European Financial Centers' Competitiveness Does membership in the Eurozone prevent a European financial center from competing at the highest level internationally? To answer this question, I will travel to European financial centers to examine how the use, or lack thereof, of the euro impacts three determinants of financial center strength: the ability to attract human capital, the access to international financial markets, and the business environment reputation. Focusing on these indicators, I will interview professors, businesspeople, and government officials to hear their thoughts on their financial center's global competitiveness and the role that the euro plays in framing it. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. To learn about the finance industry in Europe within the context of its broader economic relations.</li> <li>2. To establish and maintain a set of European contacts in academia and the finance industry.</li> <li>3. To learn about the cultural differences that distinguish the business environment in Europe from that of the United States.</li> </ol>
James Band            Jane Healey, Australian Rural	Gresham Private Equity &amp; Australian Child Cancer Foundation My summer will be divided into two projects. The first part will be a comprehensive internship at

Leaders Fund	Gresham Private Equity Group in Sydney, Australia. Here I will be working as a financial analyst, aiding the corporate advisory division with their mergers and acquisitions occurring over the period of my internship. The second part of my summer will be with the Australian Child Cancer Foundation, where I will be working with the fundraising division, with a focus on corporate and large-event fundraising for the charity. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Develop financial analysis skills at Gresham Private Equity that I will be able to transfer to my next summer and post-college life.</li> <li>2. Grow a large number of connections for my personal network of advisors from my experiences at both Gresham Private Equity and the Australian Child Cancer Foundation. I hope to use these connections for my next summer as well as to be sources of advise for me in the future.</li> <li>3. To create opportunities for both the Robertson Scholarship to have future scholars to work in the organizations I will be working with.</li> </ol>
Joseph Calder Omid Safi, Dept. of Religious Studies, UNC	Internship with UNICEF – CEE-CIS I will be working UNICEF Central and Eastern Europe – Confederation of Independent States to help create a database of social work related resources in 21 Central, Eastern and Post-Soviet countries. My work will be situated in Geneva, Switzerland at the UNICEF offices. Hopefully I will be able to create a smaller database specifically catered to Syrian refugees living in Europe . Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Become familiar with the diplomatic and NGO community in Geneva</li> <li>2. Develop a connection with someone who can help me do field work with refugees next summer</li> <li>3. Develop my Arabic speaking abilities</li> </ol>
Thomas Cole David Brunell, independent consultant	IndoChina Capital I will be working at IndoChina Capital in Southern Vietnam in their renewable energy division. I will experience full professional and cultural immersion in South East Asia and will make an impact in this unfamiliar environment. Following that, I will return to London for August, where I will undertake a short internship at Oliver Wyman Consulting Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Obtain a greater understanding of renewable energy, the emerging markets and the investment industry.</li> <li>2. Take on greater responsibilities than I would otherwise have I n an internship in a Western country, and feel as though I have made a visible impact.</li> <li>3. Make lasting connections with the people and culture of Vietnam and re-establish connections in London.</li> </ol>
Jamal Edwards Kearsley Stewart, Global Health Institute, Duke	Robertson Exploration Summer
Nadine Goldberg Zoila Airall, Student Affairs, Duke	Exploring Student Affairs at Dartmouth College I will be interning at two offices at Dartmouth College: the Office of Pluralism and Leadership and the William Jewett Tucker Foundation, which focuses on service, spirituality, and social change. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Confirm my interest in pursuing a career in student affairs through first-hand experience</li> <li>2. Expand my understanding of the field and of how one can make an impact in it through conversations with the student affairs professionals around me</li> </ol>
Pranav Haravu David Boyd, Global Health Institute, Duke	Ayurveda to Startups: Documenting Healthcare Delivery in India India lives between the old and new—recognizing Ayurveda, Unani, Sidha, and bio-medicine all as acceptable forms of healing. Traditional medicine flourishes alongside medical start-ups changing the landscape of modern health care delivery. Through photographic and written documentation, ultimately culminating in a self-published book, Jacob and I hope to track the role of traditional medicine in India. Additionally, we will work with IPIHD, a support system for medical start-ups, to learn more about new health care delivery, creating promotional videos. Our book and our videos will serve as an example of our own new learning and a portal into Indian medicine. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Document the role traditional medicine plays in healthcare delivery for non-curable diseases in various regions of India compared to biomedicine, covering aspects such as patient choice, regulation, pharmaceutical and herbal drug production networks, and the cultural factors unique</li> </ol>

	to traditional medicine systems. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>2. Provide IPIHD and Vatsaalya with high quality promotional videos to help them procure grant funding.</li> <li>3. Learn and explore a broader sense of medicine and healing, as well as greatly improve my photography and documentary skills</li> </ol>
AJ Hatzis Richard Vernon, Dept. of Portuguese, UNC	Open Democracy Advice Centre (ODAC) Legal Intern I will be researching and assisting ODAC as a legal intern in the field of human rights and freedom of speech. It will involve a lot of research on policy issues as well as potentially working with government departments. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Investigate whether Law is a viable career option for me by asking the people that work for ODAC as well as asking any interns that may be at Law School while I am there.</li> <li>2. Make a strong impact into whatever role I end up in at ODAC</li> <li>3. Investigate life in Cape Town and South Africa as an up-and-coming country that still has many structural issues.</li> </ol>
Fedor Kossakovsky Gabrielle Calvocoressi, Dept. of English and Comparative Literature, UNC	A Creative Look at Science I believe that a solid understanding of science empowers people to believe in themselves and to develop new ideas. I am still waiting on a response from Science Friday, but no matter if I end up in New York or Uganda, I will use and further develop my creative writing skills in order to communicate science to a lay audience. In Uganda I will work with FSD to create easy-to-use kits to distribute solar panel technology and in NYC I will help curate their website and, hopefully, write copy and pitch story ideas that would be broadcast on air. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Develop my voice as a creative science writer</li> <li>2. Provide accessible writing on science to empower the reader</li> <li>3. Take more personal initiative on aspects of projects I feel passionate about</li> </ol>
Joanna Kuang Heather Settle, Global and Civic Opportunities, Duke	Global Perspectives on Social Entrepreneurship My Exploration Summer consists of three components. First, I will be returning to the Mississippi Delta, and helping the Sunflower County Freedom Project improve and renovate their nutrition and fitness program. For the next seven weeks, I will be working in the city center of Sao Paulo, Brazil, at SMZTO, a holding company for multi-sectoral franchisees that add innovative and creative value to their market. This is through the Connect Fellows program at Duke. For the last six weeks, I will be based in the Triangle area in North Carolina, taking a summer course in mathematics. At the same time, I will be engaging in research with UNC's School of Public Health, and interning at the Center for Environmental Farming Systems with either their FoodCorps program or their partnership with Firsthand Foods, a local meat distributor. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Learn new skills I have yet to explore, specifically business and management skills that would directly apply to working in private industry, because I have the most experience working with non-profits and would love to experience other sectors, to decide what industry I want to work in when I am older.</li> <li>2. Go somewhere I would not normally go had I not had the Robertson summer opportunities, to gain a global perspective and understand cultures different from my own. I think this will make me a better leader in the future, because I will have the ability to empathize with other cultures.</li> <li>3. Engage with parts of myself I do not get to engage during the academic year. Specifically, I would like to reflect, focus on personal health, and gain independence.</li> </ol>
Abdul Latif Abdullah Antepi, Muslim Chaplin, Duke Divinity School	Critical Muslim Dialogue and Qasid Arabic This Summer I hope to attend an advance Islamic Studies Summer School in Granada, Spain where I will network and learn from Europe's Islamic Studies and De-colonial Studies Experts. Thereafter I will learn Modern Standard and Classical Arabic in Amman, Jordan to help with both my religious goals and career goals. In Amman, I will volunteer with local Refugee Aid organizations to give back to community and positively utilize my new Arabic knowledge. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Engage in serious soul searching- i.e. focus on extinguishing the ego in new environments and determining the direction of my career goals.</li> <li>2. Reach an Advanced level of Islamic Studies and network with top intellectuals in the field.</li> <li>3. Reach an Advanced level of Arabic and develop an appreciation for Middle Eastern Cultures.</li> </ol>

Daniel Lim David Brunell, independent consultant	Exploring Finance in South-East Asia I propose to work as a summer analyst at Indochina Capital, which is a private equity firm in Vietnam with divisions including renewable resources, real estate investments and a financial advisory branch. My position would be in the renewable resources division located in Ho Chi Minh City. I would primarily be responsible for evaluating the profitability and feasibility of specific investment deals and preparing PowerPoint presentations and pitch books for potential deals. I hope to gain a well-informed knowledge of the financial industry in South-East Asia and also explore the processes that developing economies go through to achieve growth. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Networking</li> <li>2. Developing Skillset</li> <li>3. Enhancing Market Knowledge of the Region</li> </ol>
Evan Lumbra Robyn Hadley, UNC General Alumni Association	Accelerace and the Next Step Challenge Accelerace is a Denmark-based internationally focused business development organization with a particular desire to support the ideas of tomorrow through the Next Step Challenge competition. My project contributes to that mission by working with the Accelerace team to attract the best talent by effectively marketing the Next Step Challenge opportunity to international start-ups. This not only fosters success for the most creative and driven entrepreneurs, but it also promotes innovation to progress technological development and to solve the world's environmental and social issues. This experience would allow me to explore a unique Danish culture and the world of entrepreneurship, and also to further aspirations in business and skills as a leader. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Contribute to Accelerace organization's and the Next Step Challenge's recruitment of and exposure to new talent in order to create opportunities for start-ups and support the most innovative entrepreneurial ideas.</li> <li>2. Immerse myself within Danish culture and business environment.</li> <li>3. Gain skills for leadership and business that I will carry into my studies, my Launch summer, and my career.</li> </ol>
Sowmya Mangipudi Benjamin Meier, Dept. of Public Policy, UNC	The End. A Cross-Cultural Analysis of End-of-Life Care, Aging, and Death The purpose of this project is to analyze specific end-of-life policies, citizens' attitudes towards these policies, citizens' personal views on the process of aging, and medical personnel's attitudes from three countries outside of the U.S: The Netherlands, Senegal, and India. The project will span 9 weeks, and will have both a research component as well as a personal exploration component. The research component will primarily address the medical aspect of the project, relating to end-of-life care across health systems. The personal component includes recording interviews, stories, and conversations with local older adults and creating a visual and written record of these accounts. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. I intend to gain a better understanding of the relationship between countries' healthcare policies regarding end-of-life care and their practical impact upon the population.</li> <li>2. I hope to gain different perspectives on the physical, emotional, and cultural aspects of aging and death, and be able to share these perspectives with others.</li> <li>3. I intend to learn more about the research design and implementation process in a global setting.</li> </ol>
Tafadzwa Matika Josmell Perez, Multicultural Programs and Carolina Latina/o Collaborative, UNC	Health Care: Dabbling with the Pieces The purpose of this summer is to grow in my understanding of healthcare and myself. It is a two-fold exploration that will manifest in a two-fold experience. The first experience will be volunteering at a Unite for Sigh Clinic in Ghana. The experience will give me hands on experience and a deeper understanding of the clinical side to health care. The second experience will be at a non-profit organization called Bantwana that works on providing a host of health care related services to orphaned children. It will allow me to gain an administrative perspective on how to lead a successful public health venture. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. To explore and find out which area of healthcare I want to pursue as a career</li> <li>2. To give back and contribute to an underserved community by volunteering at clinic</li> <li>3. To understand some of the dynamics and challenges of health care in Africa</li> </ol>
Mehul Mehta	Explorations in Consulting Abroad and Non-Profit Education

Krishna Srinivasan, Miracle Foundation	This summer, I will be exploring two seemingly disparate spheres, financial consulting and non-profit education work, to hone my passions and leadership skills that draw me to each of them. I will first be in London, working a consulting internship for Oliver Wyman that will hopefully equip me with the skills and experiences to confirm my interest in the field as well as position me for success moving forward. For the second half of my summer, I will be working in India for The Miracle Foundation, applying my experience in education at SCFP to students in orphanages across India to develop a vision for their education for the next five years. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. I hope to contribute to the project I'm placed on in London this summer in a tangible, meaningful way and further develop concrete business skills.</li> <li>2. I hope to make significant progress on my work with the Miracle Foundation before arriving in India</li> </ol>
Grace Oathout Amy Unell, Arts Entrepreneurship &amp; Duke Silicon Valley, Duke	New York City, New York "Girl Rising" is a film released in 2013 in association with The Documentary Group and Vulcan Productions. Since the production of their film, the group has received a lot of media attention and helped raise awareness about the benefits of educating women. Girl Rising offers several internships related to media, the ones that I have applied for include Social Media, Global Community Engagement, NGO Partnerships and Digital Media Intern. I'd have the opportunity to work closely with a media production group while engaging with an issue I care deeply about – gender inequality. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Learn about the media industry, particularly the business aspects.</li> <li>2. Expand my breadth of experiences with media, either internet or film-based.</li> <li>3. Have an impact with my work on raising awareness for women's education.</li> </ol>
Nick Orr Stephen Smith, Dept. of African and African-American Studies, Duke	Climbing and Non-profits in Nepal A visit to Nepal consisting of three components: first, a 30-day challenging hike to the base camp of the world's highest peak, Mount Everest; second, an exploration of aid-work and non-profit potential and challenges in a developing country; finally, an exploration of a culture and part of the world to which New Zealanders feel a strong connection. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Return to New Zealand and Duke next year in top physical and mental shape.</li> <li>2. Understand opportunities and challenges for non-profits in Nepal and other developing countries</li> <li>3. Explore a culture that is very different from any that we have experienced before and come back with knowledge and an appreciation for these differences and an alternative way of life.</li> </ol>
Thomas Prebble Anne Light, Academic advising, Duke	Climbing and Non-Profits in Nepal A visit to Nepal consisting of three components: first, a 30-day challenging hike to the base camp of the world's highest peak, Mount Everest; second, an exploration of aid-work and non-profit potential and challenges in a developing country; finally, an exploration of a culture and part of the world to which New Zealanders feel a strong connection. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Return to New Zealand and Duke next year in top physical and mental shape.</li> <li>2. Understand opportunities and challenges for non-profits in Nepal and other developing countries</li> <li>3. Explore a culture that is very different from any that we have experienced before and come back with knowledge and an appreciation for these differences and an alternative way of life.</li> </ol>
Jacob Rosenberg Jeremy Grant Moulton, Dept. of Public Policy, UNC	Ayurveda to Start-Ups: Documenting Health Care Delivery in India India lives between the old and new—recognizing Ayurveda, Unani, Sidha, and bio-medicine all as acceptable forms of healing. Traditional medicine flourishes alongside medical start-ups changing the landscape of modern health care delivery. Through photographic and written documentation, ultimately culminating in a self-published book, Pranav and I hope to track the role of traditional medicine in India. Additionally, we will work with IPIHD, a support system for medical start-ups, to learn more about new health care delivery, creating promotional videos. Our book and our videos will serve as an example of our own new learning and a portal into Indian medicine. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Document the role traditional medicine plays in healthcare delivery for non-curable diseases in various regions of India compared to biomedicine, covering aspects such as patient choice,</li> </ol>

	regulation, pharmaceutical and herbal drug production networks, and the cultural factors unique to traditional medicine systems. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>2. Provide IPIHD and Vatsaalya with high quality promotional videos to help them procure grant funding.</li> <li>3. Gain concrete skills in filmmaking, travel writing and documenting traditional cultures.</li> </ol>
Sophia Sennett Victoria Szabo, Dept. of Information Science and Information Studies, Duke	Internship at the Rockefeller Foundation, Asia Cities Climate Change Resiliency Network (ACCCRN) My Exploration Summer will consist of three and a half months working at the Rockefeller Foundation's Asia Regional Office in Bangkok, Thailand. There I will contribute to the office's Asian Cities Climate Change Resilience Network (ACCCRN) that creates urban projects by building dialogue and partnership between ten Southeast Asian cities. The position responsibilities include contributing to research, analysis, as well as coordination and administrative support as needed. I look forward to adding this experience to a long-standing passion for understanding how climate change impacts communities particularly in low-lying regions. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Learn about climate change and resiliency from the ten ACCCRN cities that collaborate in the network.</li> <li>2. Produce high quality deliverables for ACCCRN utilizing background from academic courses in visual and media studies, international development, environmental policy, and urban studies.</li> <li>3. Travel and explore spaces beyond the office to bridge culture and the arts with infrastructural and environmental challenges examined within the position.</li> </ol>
Jacqueline Slorach Jaqueline Pound, Dept. of French, Duke	Exploration Summer—UN Investments On-the-ground liaison for UN member David Stillman's organization, PPAF. My primary duty will be working at the Batey Relief headquarters in Santo Domingo. I'll be designing an Investment Business Plan to further develop their agricultural production as they're in the critical stage of redesigning their production to meet self-sufficiency and profits. I will also be meeting with and assessing the organizations that PPAF is currently involved, reinforcing connections, in the case of the Batey business plan project, and assessing possible new rapports. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Learn and refine skills pertaining to business plans, investments and professional writing</li> <li>2. Leave with an understanding of the needs 1st hand of places such as Haiti and DR, and of how a multitude of organizations coordinate their individual expertise to help communities more efficiently</li> <li>3. Contribute tangible changes to the organizations I work with by using my own skill set and fresh perspective to the best of my ability and with my utmost effort. This will most likely be in the form of the Batey business plan. I want to leave this summer knowing that my time was valuable not just to me, but also to others.</li> </ol>
James Smith Jeremy Petranka, Dept. of Economics, UNC	Social Entrepreneurship Internship with Hybrid Social Solutions/Stiftung Solarenergie Foundation Philippines I will be spending the summer interning with an award-winning social entrepreneurship venture and its partner non-profit. HSSI is a for-profit business but offers a "hybrid chain" solution where they provide low-cost products and offer repairs, as well as long-term payment options with fair interest rates. StS Foundation is a non-profit business looking to start a "library" of solar lamps that children can "check out" in order to do schoolwork at night. I would work on grant writing, resource/electricity mapping, marketing/advertising, creating PowerPoints and brochures, going on field visits and coordinating with schools. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Learn how to use profit motives to influence individuals to make environmentally conscious decisions in a for-profit model.</li> <li>2. Learn how to explore and live by myself in another country.</li> <li>3. Supplement my academic interests in environmental science, public health, biology, etc. with hands-on travel and work experiences abroad</li> </ol>
Devin Solanki Poornima Vijayashanker, Entrepreneurship &amp; Electrical and Computer Engineering, Duke	Entrepreneurship at TruBrain
Michael Yang	Exploring a New Field in a New Continent

Nicolette Cagle, Nicholas School of the Environment, Duke	During my Exploration Summer, not only will I be exploring a new career field, but also a new continent as a consulting intern at Oliver Wyman’s London Branch. For the first half of the summer, I will be working on partner development before transitioning to a consulting case. As a former pre-med student, I aim to explore the field of business firsthand to judge whether or not it fits well with my interests and characteristics, but to also improve my analytical thinking and teamwork skills and to leave a tangible impact. Goals <ol style="list-style-type: none"><li>1. Experience and attain a clearer picture of whether or not business is the right field for me.</li><li>2. Learn to work in a team more effectively through better communication and distribution of work.</li><li>3. Leave a lasting, tangible contribution at Oliver Wyman.</li></ol>
---	--